

November 3, 2009

Aurora College New Website - Launch

I am pleased to announce that on November 2nd, Aurora College launched its new website. The new website is a dynamic and interactive communications tool and information source for our existing and potential students, partners and the general public. The new site provides:

- Information about our programs and services
- online reference resources
- access to student email accounts (currently being piloted at Yellowknife/North Slave Campus)
- information on college-wide and campus specific news items, events, and ongoing projects
- the ability to apply online (coming in the very near future)
- details about current partnerships with educational institutions and other training agencies
- tender/contract information
- information on employment opportunities

I invite you to tour our site at www.auroracollege.nt.ca, and to discover for yourself how comprehensive and well-designed it is. I am proud of the work Aurora College staff have done in creating this new website. Not only does it put more communication tools in the hands of our current and prospective students, it also allows faculty and staff throughout the College system to update information remotely, ensuring that the website's content is current and relevant to specific locations in communities throughout the NWT.

In an area as vast as the Northwest Territories, Aurora College must make use of all avenues of communication to allow people to access our programs and services. I believe that our new website will accomplish our goal of connecting more effectively with Northerners and helping them achieve their educational aspirations.

Kinanaskomitin; Mahsi; Ma'hsi; Masi; Marsi; Merci; Quyanainni; Quyanaq; Quana; Thank you

Sarah Wright Cardinal
President, Aurora College